the English Press on the subject, alluding particularly to the Globe, the Morning Post and the Morning Advertiser, which, he says, accused Sardinia of ceding one of her best forts to Russia, to the detriment of her own interest, and those of England. He recalls the fact that the Piedmontese Gazette has already rectified these erroneous impressions conveyed by badly informed correspondents. He alludes to the mission granted to the American Government in the Gulf of Spezzia, and concludes by requesting the various diplomatic agents to explain the matter in its proper light whenever they shall be called upon so to do.

The Invalide Russe states, that the telegraph from St. Petersburg to Moscow is to be extended to the frontiers of China, by which means it will be possible to receive news from Pekin in a week.

A large caravan of Russo-Greek missionaries started a month ago under the Archimandrite Gouri for Pekin. Russia will be first in the field of conversion.

America is said to have demanded permission for a United States frigate in the Mediterranean carrying some guns from the Dispensation, allowed to pass the Straits to go up to Constantinople and Russia; another instance that no exception had been made in favor of the American frigate which conveyed Prince Adalbert, of Bavaria, to Turkey; likewise wishes to have one of her frigates permitted to visit Constantinople.

A concession had been granted to some English capitalists to establish a General Bank at Constantinople, upon the model of European banks, and under the surveillance of the Government.

The Independance Belge publishes the list of the Woide Convention, but the particulars are already known.

A Vienna letter says Servia is at present in a state of great agitation. A conspiracy has been formed to weaken the Government, and to recall, on democratic principles, the family of the old Prince of Servia. And a letter from Belgrade, in the Zeit of Berlin, states that the Minister of the Interior has constrained the Prince to consent to a general assembly of the people. There is reason to fear that the assembly would be a stormy one, which would cause danger, as everybody in such an assembly is armed.

India.

The following items of interest are contained in the India House Dispatch, dated at Bombay, Sept. 7:

On the 26th of August, Sir Hope Grant sent a force across the Goomtee at Sultanpore, and occupied three villages in his front.

Captain Macmullen, with his Sikhs, fell in with the rebels at a village near Rentin Chasee, Pocksu District, on the 31 of August, drove them out, killing and wounding sixty.

Captain Dennehoy, with detachments of regulars and a party of military police, came up with Wuzeer Sing, of Reeva, at Bearroh, on the 25th of August, and killed about 200 of his men.

The Gwalior rebels, after their defeat on the 14th of August, fled in a southeasterly direction, giving out that it was their intention to enter the Bombay Presidency via Mundisore. However, on finding this line of retreat was menaced by the force from Nemuch, under Colonel Fraser, they turned north, toward Sheerware, and on the 20th of August reached Jabra Patuee, which they surrounded. After some days' fighting with the Rana's troops, they obtained possession of the town, which they have plundered. The Rana fled, and is now in Colonel Lockhart's camp at Sooseer, Boondee is 25 miles off Oojein. A column under Colonel Hope Grant left Indore on the 24 instant, to support the one which had been previously detained under the command of Col. Lockhart, of her Majesty's 23d Highlanders. The rebels are in full possession of Patteen, erecting defences, and throwing up breastworks on the roads of approach.

Abel Mohamed has moved from Jerouge, and taken possession of Poorsaee. The movement threatens Dhalsa and towards Guzerat.

A small force from Ahamabad attacked and dispersed a body of Mumbranees and Bheels at Mundelie on the 22d of August. The rest of the Bombay presidency is quiet.

Major Hamilton writes from Moortas that at noon on the 31st of August, the Sixty-ninth and Sixty-second Native Infantry and the Native Artillery, all disarmed, broke out, and tried to seize the guns and arms of the Fusiliers. They were repulsed, great numbers slain, and the rest driven from the cantonment into jungles towards the river. Our loss was four men of the Royal Artillery, and Captain Mules, of the Fusiliers. Major Hamilton heard of the intended outbreak in time to warn the military authorities.

He had with the Police Battalion, already arrested 90 of the fugitives.

The English Treaty with China.

The following is the synopsis of the Treaty effected by Lord Elgin with China, as put forth by the British Foreign Office. It was signed at Tientsin, June 26:

Art. 1. Confirms the Treaty of Nankin of 1842, and abrogates the Supplementary Treaty and General Regulations of Trade.

Art. 2. Provides for the appointment of Ambassadors, Ministers, or other Diplomatic Agents on the part of either country at the Courts of Pekin and St. James.

Art. 3. Contains provisions for the permanent establishment of a British Minister, his family and suite, at Pekin, and the forms to be observed in his communications with the Imperial Government.

Art. 4. Makes arrangements for the traveling and the transmission of the correspondence of the Minister and the employment by him of special couriers.

Art. 5. The Emperor of China consents to nominate one of the Secretaries of State or some high officer to transact business with the British Minister either personally or in writing, on a footing of perfect equality.

Art. 6. The same privileges are to be granted to the Chinese Minister in London.

Art. 7. Consuls may be appointed in China, and may reside in any of the open ports, and their official rank and position as regards the Chinese local authorities is determined.

Art. 8. The Christian religion as professed by Protestants or Roman Catholics to be tolerated, and its professors protected.

Art. 9. British subjects to travel for pleasure or trade into all parts of the interior, with passports from their Consuls, countersigned by the local authorities. The regulations as regards these passports are determined. The provisions of the article not to be applied to ships' crews, for the due restraint of whom regulations are to be drawn up by the Consul and local authorities. No pass to be given to Nankin, or cities in the hands of the rebels.

Art. 10. British merchant ships are to be allowed to trade up the great River, (Yang-tse,) but in the present disturbed state of the Upper and Lower Valley, no port is to be opened for trade with the exception of Chin Kiang, which is to be opened in a year from the signature of the treaty. When peace is restored, British vessels are to be admitted to trade at such ports as far as Hankow, not exceeding three in number, as the British Minister, after consulting with the Chinese Secretary of State, shall determine.

Art. 11. In addition to the present ports, New Chwang, Tang Chow, Tai Wan (Formosa), Chow Chow (Swatow), and Kiung Chow (Hainan), are to be opened, and the right of residence and holding landed property is conceded.

Art. 12. British subjects are to make agreements for landed property at the rates prevailing among the people.

Art. 13. No restrictions to be placed on the employment by British subjects of Chinese subjects in any lawful capacity.

Art. 14. The hire of boats for transport of goods or passengers to be settled between the parties themselves, without the interference of the Chinese Government. The number of the boats not to be limited, and no monopoly allowed. If any smuggling takes place, the offender to be punished according to law.

Art. 15. All questions in regard to rights of property or person between British subjects to be subject to the jurisdiction of the British authorities.

Art. 16. Chinese subjects guilty of any criminal act towards British subjects to be arrested, and punished by the Chinese authorities according to the law of China; British subjects committing any crime in China to be tried and punished by the Consul or other public functionary according to the laws of Great Britain.

Art. 17. Determines the mode of procedure in the matter of complaints on the side either of British or Chinese subjects.

Art. 18. Provides for the protection of the persons and property of British subjects.

Art. 19. If any British merchant vessel in Chinese waters is plundered by robbers or pirates, the Chinese authorities are to use every endeavor to capture and punish the offenders and to recover the stolen property.

Art. 20. Wrecked or stranded vessels, or vessels undergoing repairs on account of weather, are to be afforded relief and security in any Chinese port, and the crews are to be furnished by the Chinese, if necessary, with the means of conveyance to the nearest consular station.

Art. 21. Chinese criminals taking refuge in Hong-Kong, or on board of British ships, shall, upon the requisition of the Chinese authorities, be given up; the same also if taking refuge in the houses or on board the vessels of British subjects at the open ports.

Art. 22. The Chinese authorities to do their utmost to arrest Chinese subjects failing to discharge their debts to British subjects, or fraudulently absconding, and to enforce recovery of the debts. The British authorities to do likewise as regards British subjects indebted to Chinese.

Art. 23. Debts incurred by Chinese, at Hong Kong, must be recovered in the courts of justice on the spot. If the debtor should abscond, and should possess real or personal property in the Chinese territory, the Chinese authorities, in concert with the British Consul, are to see justice done between the parties.

Art. 24. British subjects shall pay, on all merchandise imported or exported, the duties prescribed by the tariff, but in no case shall they pay other or higher duties than the subjects of other foreign nations pay.

Art. 25. Import duties to be considered payable on the landing of the goods, and duties of export on the shipment of the same.

Art. 26. The tariff fixed by Article 10 of the Treaty of Nankin to be revised by a Commission of British and Chinese officers, to meet at Shanghae, so that the revised tariff may come into operation immediately after the ratification of the treaty.

Art. 27. Either contracting party may demand a further revision of the tariff and of the commercial articles of the treaty at the period of ten years; but six months' notice must be given, or the tariff is to remain in force for ten years more, and so at the end of each successive ten years.

Art. 28. It is agreed that, within four months of the signature of the treaty, the Chinese Collector of duties at ports already opened and hereafter to be opened to British trade shall be obliged, on application of the Consul, to declare the amount of duties leviable on produce between the place of production and the port of shipment, and upon imports between the consular port in question and the inland markets named by the Consul; and a notification thereof shall be published in English and Chinese. British subjects may, however, clear their goods of all transit duties by payment at a single charge of the amount of the charge to be calculated as near as possible at the rate of 2½ per cent. ad valorem duty; and it is to be fixed for each article at the conference to be held at Shanghae.

Art. 29. British merchants must apply to the Superintendent of Customs for a special permit to land or ship cargo. Cargo landed or shipped without such permit will be liable to confiscation.

Art. 30. No transhipment from one vessel to another can be made without special permission, under pain of confiscation of the goods transhipped.

Art. 31. The Superintendent of Customs shall give a port clearance when all dues and duties have been paid, and the Consul shall then return the ship's papers.

Art. 32. If the British merchant cannot agree with the Chinese officer in fixing a value on goods subject to ad valorem duty, each party shall call in two or three merchants, and the highest price at which any of the merchants would purchase them shall be assumed to be the value of the goods.

Art. 33. Provides that duties shall be charged upon the net weight of each article, making a deduction for the tare weight of congee, &c., and regulates the manner in which the tare on any article such as tea shall be fixed. The British merchant may appeal to his Consul within 24 hours of the decision of the electrician for working through the cable in its present defective state, also show most conclusively that one defect in the insulation, however great, would not be sufficient to interrupt the communication; there must be several faulty places in the line. That some, if not the majority of these places are close to the land there can be very little doubt. The soundings from Valentia for about 60 miles to sea show a rocky and irregular bottom, which, indeed, the precipitous cliffs which line the coast and the numerous lofty islands which surround it in all directions would show without the aid of the sea-lead. Over these submarine hills and valleys a very strong current sweeps, to resist which it would require a cable at least three times as thick as the one now in use. The small piece of the Atlantic cable which connects Valentia Island with the main land, a distance of about an English mile, is repeatedly being cut and injured by the tide drifting it across the rocky bottom; and it is quite possible to suppose that the rapid current outwards from the broad estuary of Dingle Bay may have the same effect upon the third Atlantic cable which runs across its mouth. It is the unanimous opinion of nearly all here that the laying of 10 or 12 miles of the thick shore end of the cable would tend permanently to obviate a great many of the difficulties with which the electrical department of this undertaking has been hitherto interrupted.

Beyond the continuance of the few experiments which I have alluded to, nothing will be done with the cable until the preconcerted experiments at both termini of the line have been made. The days upon which they are to take place have been fixed for early in the ensuing month. The results of these experiments will, no doubt, show with greater certainty the nature and position of the results than could be shown at one end only. These researches will also demonstrate the possibility or impossibility of making the line work in its present defective condition.

The Staten Island Riot.

From the London Daily News.

It is a serious matter at any time to deal with a disturbed, much more with an insurgent New-York. There is nowhere a more heterogeneous population, and the great heterogeneous populations of the world's chief ports are elsewhere kept in order by the ancient customs of long-established power. Twenty years ago it was a fearful sight to see New-York on an election day, with its crowds of Irish and German immigrants rushing to vote where they pleased, and as many times over as they pleased. It was a fearful thing then to see a New-York mob excited against free negro laborers, or against Abolitionists, or against any obnoxious political party of the hour; and any agitator might levy a New-York mob who had the audacity and the skill to appeal to the crude republicans just set ashore in their land of liberty. Since that time the peril seems to have been continually on the increase. The best citizens have retired immediately, and left the official field open to such a magistracy as occupied it last year, and as partly occupies it still. For some time past the City, its wealth, its respectable population, have lain at the mercy of "Rowdies" and the emigrant forces they can at any time raise anywhere round the spacious harbor. The work to which the German and Irish refuse population has been summoned happens to have been the destruction of the Quarantine Establishment on Staten Island, as that has happened to be the first urgent temptation. It is understood that the most substantial and respectable emigrants generally leave the ports at the first possible moment. The capitalists and sober country families of the old continent march through to the interior, while the dregs sink down at once and constitute the rabble of the ports. It appears that a considerable number of these, German and Irish particularly, live on Staten Island, where they find employment among the shipping. Their poor dwellings cover a good deal of ground, which has acquired a high value since Staten Island has become a favorite suburb of New-York. It was a matter of vehement complaint throughout the Summer and Autumn of 1857 that yellow-fever patients were landed in Staten Island, where the wealthy citizens had built themselves dwellings for health's sake, whereas the ship captains and importing merchants say that the Quarantine establishment was always there—in its most convenient place; and that persons who chose to go and live beside it have no right to complain of its presence, any more than a stranger who chooses to settle down on the edge of a farm has a right to complain of manure being brought upon the land; the most appearing to be that the new settlers took up their position for the Island before that aggravation of the yellow fever which has marked the last two or three seasons. The attempts made to enforce a removal of the establishment from the immediate spot having failed, a local Board of Health declared the Quarantine Hospitals to be a nuisance which ought to be abated. This was the critical moment, as every official person in and near New-York must have known. Nothing was done by the Sheriff of Richmond, the county in which Staten Island lies, and, as to what was done on the other side, more is known now than at first—or supposed to be known. The owners of land covered with the dwellings of the poor strangers have seized their opportunity, we are told. The Irish and Germans have been roused to wrath and panic about the Quarantine Hospitals, and about a party of people from within the establishment having been taken to the polls and mixed with the crowd there. The destruction of the hospitals and all the dwellings and outhouses within the inclosure was the consequence. Two pigs were devoted to the sheriff, and the very people who had been scared by the mere fiction of the hospitals were seen carrying off the yellow-fever and small-pox patients with the furniture of the hospitals to the borders. We have no authentic details yet of the number of deaths in consequence of the exposure of the sick; but eye-witnesses relate terrible and disgusting facts of the cruelty perpetrated by exposing the helpless patients to the fire on the one hand, and wind and weather on the other. It will take some time to prove whether there is any spread of the most dreaded evil—yellow-fever. Good citizens meantime feel that a worse malady has spread in the community. A visitation of fever comes to an end; and a season of health and security may follow. But mutiny and rebellion in the freest of popular governments is a calamity which leaves fatal mischief behind it; which, indeed, perpetuates itself with constant aggravation. If a new Quarantine establishment could arise to-morrow, in the remotest place desired, and Staten Island were covered with mansions, the there would still be worth less in relief, as property in value, from the events of this month. Every citizen must feel that the social structure is tainted, and a quickened and reckless sense and lawlessness will increase accordingly. The only hope of retrieval lies in a vigorous assertion of the law, and in bringing its penalties to bear on the agitators. The "municipality" of Jersey, which lent mobs to America, and who came over to see us on this occasion. But we cannot perceive that anybody expects any procedure of the kind. The Governor of the State of New-York has proclaimed Richmond County to be in a state of insurrection, and has sent a posse of militia to Staten Island. What they will find to do there we shall hear. Meantime, they were received with cheers; and this is all—except that the excitement in New-York is subsiding. It will probably subside so as to leave no traces of the event except the ruins on Staten Island, and the effects on the mind of the community—the dread of the timid, and the triumph of the sullen disturbers. No doubt the most prevalent desire is to get through without being the occasion of the expected collision—the particular spark which causes the prepared explosion. When the time of crisis comes, however, those communities will have the lowest chance of a good deliverance which have become least brave and faithful in their allegiance to law and guardianship of the public peace.

London Money and Stock Markets.

From the London Times, Sept. 28.

There has been great buoyancy in the English funds to-day, and Consols have closed at a further improvement of a ¼ ⅜ cent. The first price was 97⅝@ ⅞, at which they remained until noon, when the Government broker, whose purchases on account of the Savings Banks had been discontinued for the past two or three weeks, resumed his operations, and took £20,000 stock. This exercised a decided influence, and an advance immediately took place to 97⅞@⅞. The market continued with a tendency to animation, and on the announcement late in the day of the failure of a speculator for a fall another upward movement occurred, and the final operations were at 97⅞@⅞. Money on the Stock Exchange is in increased abundance, and there is now no difference between the quotations of Consols for delivery and for the 13th of October.

It must not be inferred that the anticipated reduction in the Bank terms of discount will constitute a merely short prelude to a new reign of speculation. Two-and-a-half per cent. is a familiar charge within modern experience and for long periods. In 1844 and 1845 it prevailed for thirteen consecutive months, and the same was the case in 1849 and 1850. Still later—namely, from the commencement of 1852—2½ and even 3 per cent. were adopted during an interval of fourteen months. Indeed, for nearly five years, dating from November, 1848, a year after the railway crisis, 3 per cent. was the highest rate, 2½ and 2 per cent. being current exactly half the time. There is consequently no reason to assume in the present case that the step will necessarily be followed by slight duration. Everything in that respect will depend on the possibility of some new impulse being found which shall enable a mania to be got up with entirely distinct features from any that have been known before. Although our periodical delusions have all inherently a perfect similarity, their external signs are invariably novel. After each former crisis the first effect of redundancy was to create a long-continued rise in the public funds and other classes of existing securities, and, although under such circumstances a foreign loan or a new and extensive enterprise could occasionally be floated, there was not the slightest danger of their finding an indiscriminate reception. The public concerned themselves wonderfully shrewd, and were never again to be led wildly into anything of the sort. They were safe until some fresh condition should arise to which they could be told the rules of any former experience were wholly inapplicable. After the last panic the gold discoveries served this turn, and the deception got up by a host of swindlers, and promoted by means of the deposits attracted to the joint-stock banks by offers of high rates of interest, and the security of the unlimited liability of their shareholders, was that the commerce of the world would suddenly prove capable of indefinite extension. All efforts would be vain to guess the character the next invention will assume, since a chief element of success must consist in its being something that no one can calculate upon. In the rapid changes of the world, commercial and political, the required protext is certain to arise in due time. The rate of material progress rapidly increases, and before the lapse of another three or four years something will have transpired to turn our acquisitive energies in a new direction. If Consols at the time should happen again to be at 101 all will be ready to listen to those who will tell them that the infallible recipe for getting 10 per cent. instead of 3 has at length for the first time been brought to light, and every warning that can then be uttered will be turned aside by sophistry and abuse. Meanwhile the public need not fan themselves into alarm at such little scheme of the ordinary character that may chance to be introduced. Amid the sublime prudence which always follows a saturnalia even the best of such things will fall flat. Better were it otherwise. It is this conceit of caution, this violent alternation from laxity to puritanism, that operates as the worst snare, and gives the most complete assurance that the change in the result not of improved general perceptions, but simply of blind terror from recent punishment, and that as soon as the smart is over the old spirit will resume its sway.

The Latest by Telegraph.

London, Wednesday Morning.

The Daily News City Article of this morning says: "Throughout the Stock Exchange the extraordinary ease of the Money market, and the rapid accumulation of bullion, are exercising a stimulating influence on every side; buyers predominate, and nearly all classes of securities are rising. Business is at the same time becoming more active, and in some departments considerable animation prevailed to-day.

Consols have attained a fresh rise of ¼ to ⅜ per cent.

In the English Share market the settlement which will be complete to-morrow (Wednesday) has been accompanied by a further great advance.

It is remarked an unusually large proportion of the purchases are of a bona fide character. Of the English Railway Stocks, York and North Midland, Great Northern and North British seem to have been taken in preference by investers. The purchases of London and Northwestern and Great Western appear to rest chiefly upon the borrowed money, and have been met to some extent by real sales.

The eagerness of bankers, and other large holders of money, to get out loans at low rates, upon securities which, under ordinary circumstances, they would decline to look at, forms a powerful lever to the rising speculation for higher prices in all departments of the market.

The amount of gold sent into the Bank, to-day, was £240,000, of which £130,000 consisted of Russian gold coin, and the rest of American bar gold. The total sent in since the date of the last return is thus raised to £280,000, and the aggregate now held must consequently exceed £19,400,000.

The Times City Article says: There has been a general increase of animation in all departments of the Stock Exchange to-day; the investments of the public having been rather numerous.

Consols opened at a further improvement of an ⅛th, and subsequently experienced another advance, which was firmly maintained at the close.

The rise during the present month has been nearly equal to 2 per cent., but the point now attained is not higher than that touched in May last, when the rate of discount was between 5 and 6 per cent., and the bullion in the bank was eight millions below its present amount.

The Paris Bourse opened with renewed spirit this morning, but the final quotations were 20c. for money, and 20c. for the account, showing a reaction of ⅛ per cent.

In the Foreign Exchange, this afternoon, the rates were generally without alteration.

It is anticipated that the Calcutta, China and Bombay mails will be delivered in London about the 31 prox.

It is stated in the Times City Article of to-day, that many persons are disposed to expect a reduction in the Russian rate of discount on Thursday next, but upon what precise authority for this it will be impossible to ascertain before that day.

It is mentioned, however, that negotiations are on foot at Paris to raise the rate of discount there to 4 per cent.

A telegram from China quotes the rate of exchange at 3s. 9½d., showing a further favorable improvement of more than 3d.

The silk settlements since the previous advices have been only 1,500 bales.

It was stated in the Daily News that yesterday the Sugar market was heavy, and a decline of 6d. to 1s. per cwt. was established.

The Royal Commission appointed to inquire into the causes and defalcations at Weedon arrived on Saturday, and visited the various departments, that they might make themselves acquainted with the mode in which business was carried on.

At the Guildhall, yesterday, a certificate of conspiracy to defraud was granted against Messrs. Cannan & Co., spirit merchants, of Liverpool, and Mr. Sumner, a general agent, and Mr. Cannan, surgeon.

The papers announce the death, on Tuesday, at Taunton, of Lady Seymour, wife of H. R. Pinsent-Seymour, Esq., and any agitator might levy a New-York mob who had the audacity and the skill to appeal to

THE MURDER OF Governeur Kemble.

Large Reward Offered.

Account of the Late Murder.

The murder of the late member of Congress from Putnam County, an account of which was published in Monday's Times, shocked the whole community when it was buried on Monday. A coroner's inquest was held upon the body at Fleming on Sunday last, when the following testimony was elicited:

Dr. Wetmore testified that he was called to attend the deceased on the night of the 3d instant, at the house of Hezekiah Ransom, in Fleming, and found him suffering from two gunshot wounds, one of the balls having entered the left side and penetrated the abdomen and the lower part of the left lung; and the other having gleamed of the left thigh bone and penetrated the fleshy part of the thigh. The deceased, after lingering a week, died from the effects of the wounds. He stated that he informed deceased that he could not survive, and was told by him, in answer to an inquiry, that he was shot by Monroe Ransom.

Mr. Lacey, keeper of the saloon at the Northern Railroad station, which is about four miles from the residence of Hezekiah Ransom, testified that on the evening of the murder Monroe Ransom came to his saloon and asked if he could leave an overcoat and parcel there for the night, remarking that Garrison was not there, he would go without an overcoat. During his stay at the saloon he had a conversation in a whisper to Mr. Lacey, and asked him if he could lend him a revolver, stating that his enemy was in California, and he felt nervous. When he left Mr. Lacey told him that he had a pistol which he could borrow for him. For this purpose he went over to the office of Justice Hayward, and asked for the loan of one, but Mr. Hayward, under the impression that he was drunk, refused to grant the request. Mr. Lacey, however, procured a pistol, which he loaned to Ransom, who left the saloon with it. The balls having entered the left side and penetrated the abdomen and the lower part of the left lung; and the other having gleamed of the left thigh bone and penetrated the fleshy part of the thigh. The deceased, after lingering a week, died from the effects of the wounds. He stated that he informed deceased that he could not survive, and was told by him, in answer to an inquiry, that he was shot by Monroe Ransom.

Mr. Lacey, keeper of the saloon at the Northern Railroad station, which is about four miles from the residence of Hezekiah Ransom, testified that on the evening of the murder Monroe Ransom came to his saloon and asked if he could leave an overcoat and parcel there for the night, remarking that Garrison was not there, he would go without an overcoat. During his stay at the saloon he had a conversation in a whisper to Mr. Lacey, and asked him if he could lend him a revolver, stating that his enemy was in California, and he felt nervous. When he left Mr. Lacey told him that he had a pistol which he could borrow for him. For this purpose he went over to the office of Justice Hayward, and asked for the loan of one, but Mr. Hayward, under the impression that he was drunk, refused to grant the request. Mr. Lacey, however, procured a pistol, which he loaned to Ransom, who left the saloon with it. At the time, said he had one loaded and one empty barrel. He accepted it, and, returning to the saloon, gave it to Bissenoff, who immediately left. He further testified that Ransom did not appear to be under the influence of liquor at the time; that he only drank one glass of beer while at his saloon, and that his conduct was nothing unusual in his appearance or manner.

Hezekiah Ransom, brother of Monroe, testified that his brother came to his residence about 10½ o'clock on the night of the murder and rang the bell. He went to the door himself, and seeing that it was his brother said "Monroe, walk in." His brother answered, "I don't like to walk in; if there was any shelter for him there that night, he would be required." "Yes, walk in." He then advanced towards his brother to take his arm, when the latter said, "Stand back, I am armed; I need not tell you that, and son of a b——h." He told his brother he must not insult his friend help, that he himself was connected with them, and he did not know why he should find fault with them. He then asked his brother again to come into the house, which the latter refused to do, saying that if he (the witness) did not send out the Irish servants he would shoot him. Witness replied, "Shoot me if you dare;" and saying this he turned him and went into the house. As he was shutting the door Monroe said, "Don't shut that door or I will burst it open." Hezekiah then ordered the servants to put the bar all the doors in the house, and, on being told by the cook that Jone, the coachman, (the deceased) had been out at the stable, he went to the stable, opened the door and hallooed to him to come to the house and bring the lantern. Immediately thereafter he heard the reports of three pistol shots, and he was of the opinion that the shots must have been fired by his brother, as he had seen no other person around there that evening.

Ann O'Neill, the cook of Mr. Hezekiah Ransom, testified that about five minutes after the report of the pistol she went out and found the coachman lying on the ground between the house and the stable. She tried to lift him up, but he said he was too weak to walk, and asked her to go for the Doctor; she went to Mr. Monroe's to get him to go for the Doctor, and while on the way, saw a man standing behind an apple tree whom she took to be Monroe Ransom. When she returned, she found the coachman had been carried into the house.

David R. Gosse, a resident of Fleming, and brother-in-law of Hezekiah Ransom, testified that from a conversation Monroe Ransom had with him at the residence of Hezekiah Ransom, in Fleming, and from other circumstances, he was of opinion that Monroe Ransom was the murderer of his brother, that he wanted about $4—$ (meaning the deceased), and that he had written to the deceased to keep out of his way when his brother was not at home.

The jury returned a verdict that the deceased came to his death from the effects of pistol-shot wounds fired from the hands of Monroe Ransom, on the 3d day of Sunday, the 3d inst. The deceased was a man of peaceable character and highly esteemed by his associates. He was buried on Monday last, in Calvary Cemetery, and was followed to the grave by a large concourse of people.

We have gleaned the following particulars relative to the alleged murderer, Monroe Ransom, who has long been a resident of this City, and is well known to a large number of citizens. He originally came from Sharon, Conn., but was brought up in the house of Ros Learwood, bookseller and stationer of this City. About the year 1836 he left Mr. Learwood, and established himself in the same business at No. 289 Broadway. While at this place he published the Gallery of Distinguished Americans, a book of some note in its day. He afterwards removed to a store under the Astor House, where he continued for some time, but at length became unfortunate in business and failed. In 1849 he went to California, at the request of his brother Hezekiah, who was then engaged in business at that place as the agent of Messrs. Aspinwall. Through the aid of his brother, and the house for which he was agent, Monroe established himself in the commission business at San Francisco. While residing there he was elected Alderman of the city. At first he was very successful in conducting that place, but, owing to his losses by fire, and large incident speculations, he finally became involved, broke up business, and returned home in 1855, poor. During that period he had spent a great portion of his father-in-law's property, and on his return to this City he lived at Fleming during the summer months, and in the winter at No. 8 Great Jones-street.

For some reason he had lately become dissatisfied with the servants whom his brother saw fit to employ about his house, and had frequently urged their discharge. He complained to his friends that they were impudent and saucy. They were probably aware of his dependent position, and did not treat him with that respect which he thought was due him. He appears to have had a particular spite against the coachman, who had several times refused him the use of the team unless he should first receive orders from his brother. His acquaintances state that he is not a quarrelsome man, whether under the influence of liquor or not, but quite the contrary. He rarely drinks to excess, but when he does he manifests an unusual wildness and excitement, which generally displays itself by his talk. He is a small man, about 5 feet 4 inches in height, has a dark complexion, and a mild blue eye. He was 58 years old on the 30, but he appears much younger. He has not been seen since the night of the murder.

Naval Intelligence.

United States frigate Merrimac, Commodore H. P. Levy, was at Spezzia on the 14th ult., all well. On the passage out the Merrimac fell in with the English merchantman, the ship Chesterfield, of London, short of provisions. A handsome supply of everything necessary was sent on board by the Merrimac, and the Chesterfield went on her way rejoicing.

The following officers have reported at the Brooklyn Navy-Yard for the ensuing year: Commodore Lewis; Commander, D. D. Ridgely; Lieutenants John Downs and John R. Eggleston; Passed-Assistant Surgeon, John M. Brown; Second-Assistant Engineers, Thomas J. Jones, Wm. S. Thompson and Edward B. Latsch.

The Habeas Corpus.

Our files of Nassau papers extend to the 26th of September. The intelligence is without interest.

The General Assembly has been further prorogued to Tuesday, the 23d of November.

The case of the American ship Jane, bound from New-Orleans to Boston, taken with cotton and wrecked on the Riding Rocks, has been decided by the local Court of Appeals. The salvors claimed an average of 75 per cent. on the cargo. The Court allowed them Final Resort awards them 50 per cent.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE ELECTION.

The Ohio triumph in Philadelphia.

Democratic Success Elected to State Treas. H. Large Opposition Majority.

Philadelphia, Tuesday, Oct. 13—9 P. M.

Returns have been received from all the districts in the city and county, and they show the election of Col. Hopkins, Democrat, to the office of State Treasurer, by a majority of 4,000 votes. Two years ago Col. Hopkins was defeated by 1,500 majority. The Democrats have also elected their entire county ticket, and have a majority in both branches of the City Councils.

Returns from the State at large are coming in very slowly, but enough is known to warrant the belief that Col. Hopkins will run ahead of his ticket, and that the Democrats have elected a majority of the Legislature.

Philadelphia, Wednesday, Oct. 14.

The Democratic majority in this city will reach 5,000. Returns from the State at large are coming in very slowly, but enough is known to warrant the belief that Col. Hopkins will run ahead of his ticket, and that the Democrats have elected a majority of the Legislature.

INDIANA STATE ELECTION.

Cincinnati, Tuesday, Oct. 12.

In the Sixth District, as far as heard from, Foraker, the Republican candidate for Congress, has reduced the Democratic majority of 1,500 two years ago to 600. In Hamilton County, the whole Republican ticket is reelected by a majority of nearly 500. Brown, Democrat, for Congress, (Fifteenth District), has 275 majority.
